Introduction

1. The Graduate Institute of Social Work (GISW) was established in 2005. Our mission is to train Master of Social Work (MSW) students to become future professional social workers.
2. The MSW program has strong faculty who are experts in a wide range of fields such as children, youth, women, aging, and family. Our faculty members provide cutting edge knowledge and skills to meet the diverse learning needs of our students.
3. When students are doing their field work and completing their master's thesis, we emphasize connecting and integrating theoretical frameworks with social work practice to meet the needs of the practice-oriented development of professional social work.
4. The MSW program actively reflects the globalization of education and highly values interdisciplinary study. The GISW team builds students' culture competency, connects students with various educational resources, and encourages them to do an international field practicum.

Instructional Objectives

- To train professional social workers in family social work.
- To integrate social work theory and practice.
- To promote interactions between social work practice and academia.
- To increase teaching and research exchange in a global context.

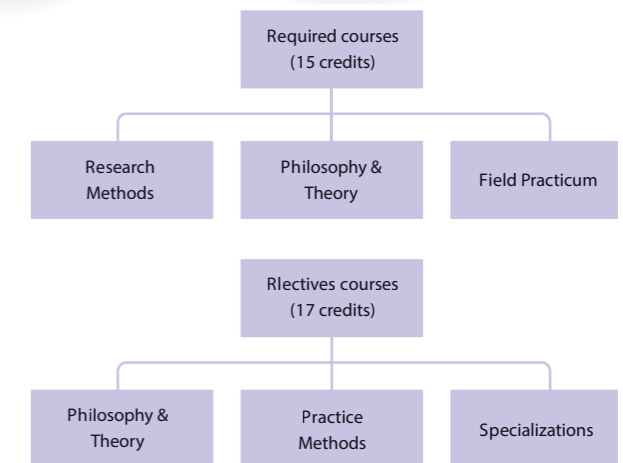

Feature of the Curriculum

1. Small class size, diverse students and faculty, and rich academic resources.
2. Emphasizing practical experience with a flexible practice curriculum. One of the two practice curriculums can be substituted by an elective course if the student's prior working experience meets all requirements.
3. Supporting overseas practicums with local supervision and online meetings with faculty—students have been to Guangzhou, Hong Kong, Mongolia, Malaysia and Myanmar.
4. Providing exchange study opportunities at the sister schools—students have been to the University of Wisconsin-Madison, University of Oslo, and Beijing Normal University.
5. Options available for master's thesis: either a research thesis or a technical report.

Degree Requirements

Students in the MSW program are required to complete 32 credit hours, comprised of required courses and electives. The program has 4 required courses (15 credits), including (1) Advanced Quantitative Research Method for Social Work Studies, (2) Social Work Theory, (3) Field Practicum I & II, and (4) Advanced Social Statistics or Qualitative Research Methods. Each student must select at least 2 elective courses from Practice Methods. The MSW degree requires completion of all courses taken, and a successful oral defense of a thesis.

Career Prospects

Students who meet the requirements of the Ministry of Examination in Taiwan are eligible to take the Senior Social Worker Licensure of Higher Examination and Exclusive Social Worker Examination.
