

College of Education

About us

College of Education was founded on June 5, 1955 with five initial departments centered on Education. To date, there is a total of seven departments, one professional college, three independent graduate institutes, two in-service master degree programs, and one transdisciplinary bachelor degree program in the College of Education, offering bachelor's, master's and doctoral programs in variety of fields in Education.

Mission

As one of the oldest colleges of education in Taiwan, the size of our departments, the quality of our teaching faculty, and the quality of our students are second to none in Taiwan. We have nurtured innumerable talents both at home and abroad. In addition to playing important roles as commissioners and key personnel posts at the head of governmental educational administrative units or university presidents and researchers in education-related fields, our graduates and alumni become teachers and educators in secondary schools in Taiwan. Numerus of them are also involved in civilian careers in cultural, education-related fields and devote themselves in industry.

International Cooperation

College of Education has been ranked among the best in education in Taiwan, and ranked 9th in U.S. New& World Report world-widely. This shows the strong power and dedication of our faculty members in research and the outstanding performances showcased by our students. Currently, College of Education and its affiliated departments/graduate institutes have built partnerships with more than 20 higher education institutions around the world. Some of which are internationally renowned, such as Pennsylvania State University, University of California-Los Angeles, Rutgers University in the United States, as well as Tohoku University and Kyushu University in Japan.
